Posted on 10/03/2018

Plans are underway for OTAN's Technology and Distance Learning Symposium 2019, scheduled for March 1 and 2 at Hacienda La Puente Adult Education - Willow Center.

The call for proposals has opened. You are invited to present and share your favorite technology tools and/or best practices with your adult education colleagues. Have you tried a method or practice that involves technology in an adult education class or a program? Share your successes and challenges by presenting at the Symposium! The call for proposals is open until Friday, November 16, 2018.

OTAN is looking for presentations that highlight technology, how it enhances the learner experience, extends the classroom to learners, and how technology integration helps adult education programs be more effective and efficient. If you would like more ideas on possible presentation topics, view last year's sessions in the TDLS 2018 program booklet on the OTAN website.

OTAN looks forward to seeing you at the Technology and Distance Learning Symposium at Hacienda La Puente Adult Education - Willow Center on March 1 and 2, 2019! If you have questions, contact Neda Anasseri (nanasseri@otan.us) or Penny Pearson (ppearson@otan.us). You can also visit the TDLS page on the OTAN website: <https://www.otan.us/tldsymposium/>. (Please note that registration for TDLS will open on Wednesday, January 2, 2019.)
